SkyEye Pro shows you where the fish are !

SkyEye Pro is a computer based weather satellite receiving system that collects data transmitted from NOAA Polar Orbiting Satellites.

SkyEye Pro tracks these satellites, captures the data and converts it into pictures.

The information that SkyEye Pro receives and converts is real time data processed on-board, ... and it's free!

Each satellite image is a wide area snapshot of the mariner's location from the satellite 450 miles overhead.

The fully automated system provides infrared images which detail sea surface temperatures, a feature most valued by fishermen.

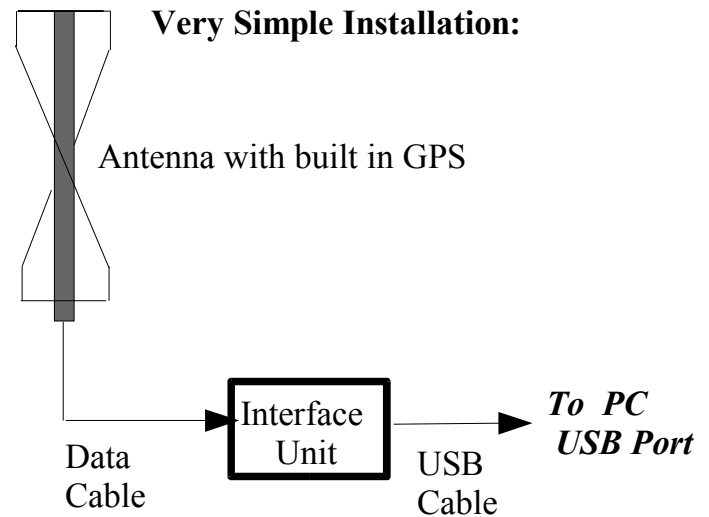

A visible light image shows cloud and weather patterns. Good weather management can optimize your working time and minimize wear and tear.

Incorporated features in the SkyEye Pro edition include:

- Very accurate sea surface temperature resolution to half a degree Fahrenheit
- Worldwide land elevations and ocean depths data
- Advanced image enhancement
- A worldwide land overlay grid
- Vessels track directly on a satellite image

New Zealand East Coast fisherman Karl Bennett says...

“The SkyEye system we have aboard Melinda receives up to five images daily allowing us to monitor change. We leave the system running and via our ship's computer we're able to monitor weather patterns and systems headed our way. With a click on the mouse and some simple image enhancement, our infrared images provide up-to-the-minute sea surface temperature data making it relatively easy to find water temperature breaks. The accuracy of these images is precise and rewarding, saving us many hours of steaming.”
